I am a native of Eagland, and while I was in that country! contracted a ferrible blood poison, and for two years was under treatment as an outdoor patient at Nottingham Hospital, England, but was not cured. I suinced the most agonising pains implements of the state of the pains of the pains in the partial loss of sight, severe pains in my head and eyes, dee. which nearly ran me crasy. I lost all hope in that country, and sailed for America, and was treated at Roosevelt in this city, as well as by a prominent physician in New York having no connection with the hospitals.

I saw the advertisement of Swift's Specific, and I determined to give its trial as a last resort. I had given up all hope of being cured, as I had gone through the hands of the best medical men in St. St. and I can say with year of your last they have ever was in my life.

PYÆMIA

Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedly fatal, but not less cerainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Bolls, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the tain to f Serofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using ATER'S ARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and rilliphe medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA

Is a foul corruption in the blood that rota out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYRR'S SARSAPARILA. ern Pennsylvania, from 1865 to 1867, a number of wells were put down in Tioga and Bradford counties, from some of which there were large flows of gas, but so far as I have been able to learn none of it was attilized. In the early oil investigations in this county gas was encountered in considerable quantities along the Mahoning, in the neighborhood of Edinsburg. Fifteen or sixteen years ago several wells were bored in Erle and along the lake the word of the and the lake the shore, and good veins of gas were struck at from 600 to 760 feet. One at Northeast supplied the light and fuel for a large paper mill, also for the residence of its owner, Mr. Johnson. Whether the flow gtill continues I am unable to state.

I have vivid recollections on going to his house when a hoy and seeing the cheerful fire-place with old-fashioned andirons, heaped up with metallic wood, perforated in such a manner that when the gas was tyrned on and ignited one had to draw on his imagination but slightly in order to think that he was roasting his shins at a genuine New England hearth of the last century. Just as his theory was developing into a fact Morrow B. considered the western boundary. The northern counties of Pennsylvania, with a slight dip into New York, for the northern boundary. The wells in Virginia and Kentucky make the southern boundary, and Bradford county, in this State is probably the extreme western point. My own unscientific opinion is, however, that it may be found in varying quantities at various depths over a very large portion o the earth's surface. Present developments have demonstrated its existence in two distinct forms—one kind found not deeper than seven bundred feet from the surface, such as from the wells in Eric and along the lake shore, which gave forth a distinct and pervasive odor and issues from a new well with a forma varying from zero to fifty pounds pressure, but after a prolonged draft upon the reservoir supplying the gas it shrinks in volume to a small percentage of its former yisid, according to the particular logality, and it the well is kept free from water it will continue for an indefinite length of time.

But there is a gas found only at a great depth, usugally below fifteen hundred feet, which is no compactly imprisoned that with the tap of the drill upon its prison house it bursts forth with terrific energy.

But there is a gas found only at a great depth, usually below liteen hundred feet, which is so sempactly imprisoned that with the tap of the drill upen its prison house it bursts forth with terrific energy, exerting a pressure yarying from five hundred to fitseen hundred pounds per square inch. This gas is almost odorless, and possesses superior illuminating and heating properties, and, being a very dry gas, the pipes carrying it need not be laid below the frost line, as no moisture condenses from it in the pipes, while with the gas obtained nearer the surface condensation takes place profusely, soon filling the obtained nearer the surface condensation takes place profusely, soon filling the pipes and obstructinz the flow of gas. Again, the physical and chemical character of this gas found at great depths vary much with the localities in which it was found. The gas found in the vicinity of Pittsburgh is a poor illuminant; nevertheless it has comparatively little door. The gas from the great gas belt near Wilsox, lying in McKean county, near the Forest county line, is by no means odorless, amokes in burning, and has a lighting capacity of only from fourteen to eighteen candle power. In the gas found in Northwestern Ohio, which is of undoubted animal origin, notable amounts of carbonic and hydro-sulphuric scids are found, which give to it a rank odor, which serves the very useful purpose of giving warnings of danger leaks. This gas is also a poor illuminant.

The gas obtained from the territory seventeen miles south of Franklin is struck at a depth of 1,700 feet, is odorless, and has superior illuminating qualities, and the amount of capital invested in lines tapping this territory shows a wonderful confidence and and faith in the supply being good and permanent.

are undefined. Five wells one mile apart I were put down by the National Transit Company to a depth of twenty-four hundred or twenty-five hundred feet, with the object of testing the territory for oil. No soil was found, but about sixty feet below the oil-rock immense veins of gas were struck. One of the wells has been pourling out its immense volume of gas without any cessation or apparent diminution for four or five years, and raises an actual pressure of seven hundred pounds in ten pressure of seven hundred pounds in ten seconds, and will fill the eight-inch line to Bradford, a distance of twenty-three miles in three minutes. From this field gas is taken through this eight-inch line to Bradford. A branch runs to Dongolia, Duke Center and Oleon, a distance of twenty miles, and from these two main branches open air. From this device sprung the modern "gas-trap," now in general use in the oil country. In the lower, or Parker oil field, the quantity of gas increased as the territory advanced southward. In the immediate vicinity of Parker City few wells had a sufficient supply of gas to keep up the steam for pumping purposes, but at Petrolia, six or eight miles to the southwest each well had a surplus. My first view of Petrolis was in the spring of 1873, and Heating Company with gas for the about 10 o'clock at night. Hundreds of wells were crowded together in the valley, and from each well the surplus gas was carried off and burned at the end of a swells were crowded the surplus gas was carried off and burned at the end of a wells were crowded together in the valley, and to mandreds of dwellings and drilling wells along the route. Another line from wells were crowded together in the valley, and to mandreds of dwellings and drilling wells along the route. wells along the route. Another line from the same wells runs to the city of Kane, the same-wells runs to the city of Kane, supplying it and the company's pump stations with fuel and light, and still another one run to Colegrove, a distance of sixteen miles. Where gas is used in dwellings the pressure is regulated to appliances for that purpose, and is usually reduced 'to from a half to two pounds, However, in some localities it is used at the regular line pressure even in dwellings, but it is considered, and doubtiess is a "dangerous commodity."

In Pittsburgh high pressure lines are run into the city for the use of the manufactories, and as Pittsburgh is now attracting the attention of the wonderful tracting the attention of the world, we will turn our attention to the wonderful magnitude of the development and application of the new fuel in that city. Natural gas has been known as a fuel and illuminant for over twenty years in the oil regions, but no movement was made toward a scientific or practical investigation of its value. It was looked upon rather as a freak of nature, transient and darreliable. Over ten years ago good gas wells within piping distance of Pittsburgh could be had for a song, and these wells have been going on ever since, wasting millons of feet daily of the best fuel ever produced. Eight or nine years ago gas was taken into a couple of suburban manufactories and used by means of crude appliances, but the wells were not taken care of and the supply was unreliable siastic advocate of the theory (for at that time it was only a theory) that North-western Pennsylvania was the storehouse of large deposits of natural gas, and that it might, could, should, and would eventually be used, to a great advantage as a fuel in our manufactories. Fully fifteen years ago he put down a well in his back yard, a few rods from the lake shore, in Erie, and obtained a good supply, of gas, which he burned in every room of nis large residence. I have vivid recollections the pall of smoke which hung over the city has been litted by its magic touch. Sunshine and pure air reaches its homes, and the clean-faced stranger is no longer an object of curiosity and envy. Some of the city proved to be phenomenal gassers at first, but like the phenomenal oil wells the production soon dropped off and became insignificant. But good, substantial, reliable territory was found close at hand. Numerous companies were organized for the purpose of distributing the gas to the city, the most important one being the Westinghouse or Thiladelphia company, which has a capital stock of $5,00,00, and is reaching out its great system of pipes until in a few months their gas will see the substantial that was a supplied to the purpose of the second of the purpose of the westinghouse or Thiladelphia company, which has a capital stock of $5,00,00.

NATURAL GAS.

Pittsburgh Correspondence St. Lowis Gloke Demosrat.
Gas in large quantities first manifested taself in the Pennsylvania oil fields in the memorable spring of 1862, from the Murray & Little well on the Buckhannan farm at Rauseyville. At the first flow at this farm at Rauseyville. At the first flow at this well-such a thing being lunheard of and the boiler being very close to the well-it caught fire, and thirty-five persons perished on the spot. The surface gas from these flowing wells was soon utilized for fuel in pumping and drilling wells, and shortly after begun to be used in dwellings. Many curious devices were contrived for separating the gas from the oil, 'the most common of which was a barrel, into which the well was allowed to flow, the gas being taken from the top by a pipe, and carried sway for use as fuel, or burned in the pen air. From this device sprung the pipe, making a fisme about the size of a barrel.

In the year 1872 a large gas well was struck in the district, which produced no oil whatever, but the gas rushed from the casing-head with a deafening roar that could be heard for miles. An attempt was made at that time to organize a company for the purpose of piping the gas to Pittaburgh, but I presume principally on account of the inferior illuminating powers of the gas the scheme was abandoned. Men's minds couldn't grasp the great possibilities of gas as a finel all at once. During the wave of one excitement in northern Pennsylvania, from 1855 to 1867, a number of wells were put down in Tioga
